

Cycle of Violence

The Cycle of Violence explores the repetitive pattern of behavior in an abusive relationship. There are three distinct phases: honeymoon, tension building, and explosion. Because the cycle repeats, it circles back to what we call the false honeymoon (apologies, promises to change, shifting blame) or just a sense of calm before tension starts to build again and another abusive incident occurs.

